

Psychologist Behavioral Sleep Medicine & Weight Management

Dear Colleagues,

I'm excited to be joining forces with registered dietitian David Orozco to form an integrative health practice. We're looking for a psychologist to join us to do both behavioral sleep medicine and weight management work. This is a contract position.

What we're looking for:

Absolute musts:

- Doctoral level or experienced Masters level
- Licensed or license-eligible in the state of Georgia (no, this position cannot be a post-doc)
- Supervised training and experience in cognitive-behavioral therapy
- Okay with and open to learning non-clinical aspects of private practice (e.g., marketing)
- Sense of humor and good life/work balance (or aspirations to good life/work balance)

Would sweeten the deal:

- Training and experience in health psychology/behavioral medicine
- Training and experience in bariatric medicine/weight management
- Licensed at least two years and/or already on insurance panels
- Experience with mindfulness-based therapies
- Formal assessment experience
- Already established in practice

Perks:

- Training in a small but rapidly growing and highly in-demand subspecialty of sleep and behavioral medicine
- Coming into a practice with an already established and strong referral stream
- Lovely furnished office with telephone, internet, and file storage
- Part-time administrator to handle telephones during busiest call hours and for those mundane office tasks none of us like (e.g., I hate filing!)
- Billing support
- Relaxed working environment
- Located near downtown Decatur, a picturesque suburb with a small-town feel
- Flexible work hours and scheduled lunches (remember that life/work balance thing?)

If you're interested and meet the first group of qualifications, and especially if you also have some of the second, please email me at anne@sleepyintheatl.com with C.V. and two references. I will be in touch about setting up interviews.
